

ALLEGED SLAYER CONFESSES AS HE SEES VICTIM'S BODY

Coroner Brands Story Told by Church as 'Tissue of Lies.'

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—Following a confession by Harvey Willard Church, boy brakeman, of Adams, Wisconsin, that he alone had murdered Bernard J. Daugherty and Carl A. Ausmus, Packard automobile salesman, in Church's home last Thursday afternoon, the confession was tonight branded by Coroner Peter M. Hoffman as a "tissue of lies."

In his confession Church said that he had held Daugherty up at the point of a gun in the basement of Church's home, that he had handcuffed him and tied a cord around his neck; that this cord had cut through the flesh. He then admitted that he had struck Daugherty with a baseball bat. Ausmus, Church said, came to the basement in search of Daugherty, that he held Ausmus up in the same manner as Daugherty, tied his hands behind his back and strangled him to death.

Church's statement is false on the face of it," Coroner Hoffman declared. "It would be physically impossible for him to have killed these two men in the manner he describes. Daugherty's throat was slashed with a razor or a sharp knife, and his jaw was broken on each side."

Ausmus was first strangled with a rope, then by a piece of cloth shoved down his throat.

"Church had confederates. I'm going to start an investigation that will clear this matter up. Church is lying to save someone else."

Church's admission came after nearly ten hours of constant questioning; and after he had been brought face to face with the body of Daugherty.

Investigator Newmark, Prosecutor Wharton, Capt. Mullen, officers and newspapermen crowded into two automobiles. At high speed the cars swept through the city to Church's home.

Given Grilling Test.

Church staggered slightly as he alighted from the car and went through the garage door.

The Harbison car had been returned to the spot in which it was found on the first day of the search. The grave of Ausmus, just below its wheels, had been filled in again. To this spot Church was led.

"Kneel down there," Newmark said, and Church sank slowly.

"That's where you buried him, isn't it?" Newmark shouted. Church leaned forward, peering beneath the car, his eyes half closed.

"You killed him, didn't you—and dragged his body here and buried him! We've got the body! Confess!"

"You killed him, didn't you?" Church asked after question was volleyed at him.

Church, like a trapped animal, swung his head from side to side. Tears came to his eyes and rolled slowly down his cheeks.

Still Denies It.

"I—I—didn't do it! I didn't do it!" he gasped. He turned his head away as if in fear of the spot. "Look at it! Look at it! What are you afraid of?" Newmark snapped. "What are you afraid of, you killed him, didn't you? You put him there alive—you stamped his shoulders and beat down his back, didn't you? He's dead now—he can't hurt you. Why are you afraid to look in there now?"

Church crumpled and lay flat on the ground in great distress. The officers then rushed him down to the basement of his home, where the alleged murders were committed. But the youth, as he was shown the blood stains in the basement doggedly denied the murder.

Church was then taken to the morgue, where his body was hustled through to the rear room where on a slab was Daugherty's body.

Gaups as He Sees Body.

They stripped the sheet from it and pushed Church in front of it.

"You killed him, didn't you?" again the query.

Church broke a gasp like that of a dying man came from his lips. He straightened up, began to fall. "Grab him! Get him out of here!" Newmark shouted and this was done.

The party got back to the State's attorney's office at 11:30 where Church signed a 24-page confession.

Following his confession Church dropped into a deep sleep. His aged parents had been held of their son's self-admitted guilt.

Lawn Fete Will Raise Fund for Nurses' Home

A lawn fete and reception for the purpose of securing funds to complete the Garfield Memorial Hospital by constructing an adequate nurses' home will be held on the hospital grounds Friday afternoon and evening by graduate and student nurses.

A musical program by the U. S. Marine Band will be held from 4 until 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Motion pictures will be shown for the entertainment of the children of the city playgrounds, and an autographed copy of "The History of the Red Cross" will be given to the winner of a popularity contest among the Red Cross nurses at the hospital.

SICKLY CHILDREN GROW RUGGED ON YEAST

Give it to them in Pleasant Tablet Form Combined With Iron.

Usually Brings Decided Results in a Few Days.

The reason many children become weak, thin, puny and run-down is because their diet is actually starving them to death! This is an actual fact. Modern cooking methods, it has been found, rob many of our healthiest foods of their most important element—vitamins. Without the proper amount of vitamins in our systems, none of us can hope to be strong and well, no matter how much we eat.

Recently scientists made the startling discovery that yeast was the richest known source of vitamins. But yeast, as such, couldn't eat common baking yeast, so after much experimenting a way was found to put yeast in tablet form. This was

AN HEIR AT LARGE

CHAPTER I.

YOUNG HENRY LIVINGSTON BACON sat hunched up in a deep chair dazed by the change in his fortunes.

Yesterday he wondered where he was to get the money to pay his room rent. Today he could buy the whole apartment house, grounds and furnishings, together with all the neighboring property for a couple of blocks in both directions.

It was incredible.

As though reconstructing an elusive dream, he recalled the events of the lawyer whose office he had so recently left.

"You have received the entire fortune of your late uncle. At his death the principal and interest became yours by virtue of a trust agreement between the settlor and the trustees made nearly four years ago. After transferring the estate to you he retained the income during his lifetime."

"Aside from half a dozen of his closest business associates, no one knew the extent of your uncle's operations or the magnitude of his fortune. He was very secretive."

Bacon remembered how he had been struck by the word "magnitude." It was unexpectedly impressive. "Having disposed of his fortune by trust agreement before his death he has circumvented the inheritance tax, for there is no will to be probated, and the size of the estate does not become public. In recent years the property has been converted almost wholly into a series of corporations, and the decision of the McCulloch against Maryland decision is not taxable by the Federal government."

"You will be interested, I'm sure, to hear that after the payment of all taxes, claims, and debts, the fortune you inherit will reach very close to—"

"The lawyer paused here to note the effect. He smiled evenly.

"Fifteen million dollars." He allowed himself the shadow of a smile. "It ought to be enough to keep the wolf from the door. Instead of keeping the wolf from the door it would probably draw many to it."

Young Bacon never dreamed of being, living in hermitlike seclusion—was so rich—far less that he might some day be his heir. In fact, he supposed himself to be in disfavor.

In college, and later in his regiment, he had won the honor of being the best amateur boxer in the 160-pound class, a distinction which could hardly have appealed to his cold, reserved uncle.

So certain was he of his uncle's disapproval that he had not appealed to him for help when he started to work nearly three years before. He had plugged along to his present position, paying $2,500 a year, without benefit of aid. During those three years he had seen little of his uncle, but evidently an appraising eye had been upon him.

"This—this fortune," he finally regained composure. "Is it to remain in the hands of the trustees?"

"Your uncle seems to have had faith in your judgment and character," the lawyer answered. "He did not tie up his estate with conditions. There are no strings leading from the grave. You are at liberty to squander every cent and ruin yourself so far as he is concerned. Of course, we all hope you will be sensible and rise to the responsibilities which such a fortune entails. Don't let it spoil you, as so many young men have spoiled so many other young men."

"You mean," said Bacon in a faint voice, "you mean that it is mine now, that I can get money now?"

"Certainly. There is a considerable sum in the bank at this moment that has not been reinvested yet."

Together they walked to the bank, where the young man was introduced to his uncle's signature-depositary. A check, visible evidence that he was not dreaming, was now in his pocket.

As the lawyer bade him good-by he asked in a kindly tone if there was anything more he could do.

"There is only one thing," Bacon had answered, a vague idea rising in the back of his mind. "Can all this be kept secret for some time—perhaps a few weeks, or months? Is that possible?"

"Certainly. No one need know except ourselves and the bank. You will be obliged to file an income tax return for several months."

And now—back in his room, gazing at the check book with its limitless possibilities, his thoughts turned to Miss Martin Lannard.

Would she still refuse him, he wondered.

ceremony gave the President the "freedom" of Atlantic City. All day real crowds flocked about the hotel for a glimpse of the President, and once when he appeared at a window, peering out with an expression of anxiety at the clouds—apparently concerned for his Palm Beach suit—cheers greeted him.

Visits Hospital.

The President went to church in the morning and in the afternoon motored to a local hospital to call on Mrs. Fred Upham, wife of the Senator-elect, and the Republican National Committee.

Later in the afternoon the President and Alexander Moore, the Pittsburgh publisher, husband of Lillian Russell, eluded out of the hotel through the Boardwalk exit, momentarily eluding the tremendous throng and the movie camera men at the main exit. They were quickly recognized, however, and the President's motorcade was halted by a solid mass of people who made his way impassable, so he returned to the Boardwalk and proceeded with difficulty back to the Ritz.

a plan for standardized and systematized plumbing, heating and other equipment going into the proposed homes, while the progress would be home-builders. Meantime chambers of commerce, civic authorities and contractors have been consulted with the idea of ensuring enthusiastic support of the campaign when it is launched. These bodies have been studying the creation of a new national building code, which will prevail everywhere and which will do away with many of the present annoying and expensive details that a prospective home-builder must endure through before undertaking construction work.

Will Lessen Cost.

To standardize many commodities going into the building of a home will not only speed the available supply of such materials but will make it cheaper and at the same time not injure the industries concerned, in the opinion of officials, which will do away with many of the present annoying and expensive details that a prospective home-builder must endure through before undertaking construction work.

They stripped the sheet from it and pushed Church in front of it.

Brentwood Takes Legion's Measure In First of Series

HYATTSVILLE, Md., Sept. 11.—Hundreds packed Zantinger's Park here this afternoon to see Brentwood defeat the nine of Snyder-Farmer Post, American Legion, 8 to 4, in the first of a series of three games.

Brentwood took the lead in the first inning when Fred Loomis hit to the woods in right field for the outright, scoring his brother, Lynn Loomis, ahead of him. Humphrey, the winning pitcher, yielded only four hits, but received at times mediocre support. Blakeman, losing pitcher, was picked for ten hits and was given ragged support. And Baldwin was the injured batting star for Brentwood, gathering four hits in five times up, including a three-base and a two-base hit. Capt. Hiser, for the losers, scored three of his team's four runs. Tony Sues, the local's right fielder, was struck over the eye by a fast one and had to be taken to a physician.

The teams will clash again next Sunday afternoon on the grounds at Brentwood on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard, near the District line.

CHAPLIN, TIRED OUT, SPENDS DAY IN BED

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The wild, almost riotous welcome that swept Charlie Chaplin through the streets of London yesterday on his first return home since he left here a poor, knock-about comedian a decade ago, left him limp, listless and wanting sleep. Today he spent his day in bed. A valet drew the blinds to shut the proper deed to exclude the sun from Charlie's slumbers and then tipped out of the chamber. From the streets outside the Ritz there arose to mingle with the purring snore of the comedy king a murmur of hundreds of voices in conversational tone. The people were considerate of Charlie.

It is understood that hereafter when he ventures from the hotel Chaplin will be accompanied by a stalwart bodyguard to "protect" him from the thousands of people who would mob him in their eagerness to shake his hand.

TWO NOMINATIONS STILL DOUBTFUL

G. O. P. Names for Sheriff -And State Senate Uncertain.

UPPER MERIDEN, Md., Sept. 11.—Conflicting reports of the vote in various sections of the county in Friday's primaries make the result of the contest for the Republican nominations for State senate and sheriff uncertain.

Thomas H. Garrison, of Hyattsville, candidate for the sheriff nomination independent of the factions claimed today that he had won over Sweeney, the organization candidate by 14, while friends of R. A. W. Pyles, of Mount Rainier, anti-organization candidate, had not given up hope of his being returned a victor over William Noble Fisher, of Seat Pleasant, organization candidate, for senatorial nomination. S. Gardiner Cook, chairman of the G. O. P. State central committee for the county, and leader of the organization forces, claims the nomination of Sweeney and Fisher along with the rest of the organization ticket. The official count of the vote will be made here tomorrow.

CALLS FOR REVISED 1917 TAX RETURNS

The Bureau of Internal Revenue has issued a ruling which will compel taxpayers to file amended returns for 1917 and subsequent years, where "appreciated and inflated values" were used in computing invested capital.

Many taxpayers have made this mistake, which is contrary to the revenue laws, according to the bureau.

Payments of additional taxes are required at the same time. Penalties are provided for failure to comply with the order.

JAMES E. WATSON MAY LEAD SENATE INSTEAD OF LODGE

Bay State Solon Must Give Attention to Conference.

Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, is expected to become leader of the Republicans in the Senate when the disarrangement conference gets under way.

Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, the present leader, is one of the delegates to the conference, as a consequence of which most of his time will be devoted to other than legislative business. Watson, under the present plan, would be actual, but not titular leader. He would succeed to the job of assistant leader, now held by Senator Curtis, of Kansas and would automatically take over Lodge's duties in the latter's absence.

Curtis President Pro Tem.

Curtis, in turn would become president pro tempore of the Senate, a position now held by Senator Cummins of Iowa. Cummins, because of ill health, has been kept away from the Senate a great deal during recent months and is said to be willing to withdraw.

Lodge, meantime, would be available for counsel, and could exert his influence as titular leader when occasion demanded.

Watson is an administration man, and has considerable following in the Senate. He is credited with ability to swing new Senators and some of the so-called Progressives.

New Men Disappointed.

New Senators have been inclined to grumble somewhat at the leadership of Lodge in the belief that they are not consulted enough, and the progressive elements have objected at times to the conservative leadership of Lodge.

The press of important legislation is cited as reason for meeting vigorous and determined leadership. The tariff, taxation, foreign debt, funding and railroad bills, and other measures on which fights are likely are ready for consideration.

Democrats May Name Hitchcock.

The Democrats also will caucus to consider selection of a leader to replace Senator Underwood, of Alabama also a delegate to the conference. Senator Hitchcock, of
